AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

First Affirmative Defense

158. Paramount alleges that WageLogic violated section 18.1 of the Licensing Agreement by participating in a series of ministerial modifications in the business activities of the CryptoLogic group of companies in the summer of 2010.

159. These modifications are set forth in paragraphs 66 – 73 of the Amended and Supplemental Complaint of WagerLogic, filed May 29, 2012.

160. Paramount's claim of termination based on said alleged violation of section 18.1 of the Agreement was directly contrary to the course of conduct of the parties, as evidenced by various communications, including e-mails and Paramount's Notice of Termination which demonstrate that Paramount knew of, acquiesced in, and approved of performance under the License Agreement by CryptoLogic and/or entities controlled by CryptoLogic. This claim of termination, moreover, was untimely, and was made only after the complaint herein was filed and more than one year after Paramount admits that it received information of an alleged transfer of rights and obligations to GPL. Thus, Paramount's claims are barred, in whole or in part, by the doctrines of estoppel, waiver, and laches.

Second Affirmative Defense

161. To the extent any activities alleged by Paramount are subject to the provisions of Section 18.1 of the License Agreement that Section does not preclude or prevent assignment, delegation or transfer of rights and obligations under the Agreement to Cryptologic or to entities controlled entirely by Cryptologic.

162. As alleged by Paramount, Cryptologic proposed that the formal licensee entering into the Agreement be one of its subsidiaries, which Paramount agreed to on condition that performance be guaranteed by Cryptologic, without which Paramount allegedly would not have entered into the License Agreement. Cryptologic continues to guarantee performance of the Agreement.

163. Having accepted CryptoLogic as guarantor of its subsidiary's performance, Paramount is estopped from purporting to terminate the Agreement based on assignment, delegation, or transfer of rights and obligations under the Agreement to any other CryptoLogic subsidiary.

Third Affirmative Defense

164. Paramount alleges that CryptoLogic violated section 18.1 of the Licensing Agreement when a majority of its stock was bought pursuant to a tender offer by Amaya.

165. The provisions of section 18.1 apply in their terms solely to WagerLogic, and any change in the ownership of a majority of the stock of CryptoLogic, not accompanied by alterations at the WagerLogic level that are prohibited without the consent of Paramount, does not violate section 18.1 of the Licensing Agreement.

Fourth Affirmative Defense

166. Paramount's claims against WagerLogic are barred because its own acts and omissions caused the alleged injury and damages complained of in the ATPC.

Fifth Affirmative Defense

167. Paramount's claims against WagerLogic arising out of its claimed terminations of the Agreement are barred by the doctrine of ratification.

Sixth Affirmative Defense

168. Paramount fails to state a cause of action for money damages against WagerLogic because it has been paid in full to date under the Agreement, and since all the obligations of the licensee required under the Agreement have been performed Paramount has suffered no monetary loss.

Seventh Affirmative Defense

169. Paramount has breached the Agreement by erroneously purporting to terminate the agreement, by not extending full good faith cooperation and assistance as required under the Agreement and by engaging in discussions or negotiations with, or entering into an understanding with, a third party concerning the future pictures referenced in the Agreement.

170. Paramount's breaches of the Agreement relieve WagerLogic of its obligations under the Agreement.

Eighth Affirmative Defense

171. On information and belief, prior to entering into the Agreement, Paramount had licensed the rights to develop and distribute Casual Gambling style games themed to one or more of the Future Pictures to a rival of WagerLogic in the internet gaming business. Such film or films had been licensed to the rival of WagerLogic previously, but such license or licenses were scheduled to terminate on or before May 1, 2012, on which date the Future Pictures became subject to the Agreement pursuant to paragraph 6.2 thereof.

172. On information and belief, in January or very early in February of 2011, Paramount signed an extension of the license or licenses referred to in the previous paragraph beyond May 2012, in violation of the exclusive license that Paramount had granted to WagerLogic, 173. Such extension constituted an anticipatory breach of the Agreement since under the Agreement WagerLogic had exclusive rights to those Future Pictures.

174. By purporting to extend the rival's license regarding the Future Pictures, or entering into agreements contemplating the extension of the rival's license regarding the Future Pictures, into the period covered by WagerLogic's license, Paramount breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing implied into the Agreement.

175. By breaching its duty of good faith and fair dealing, Paramount became estopped to seek to terminate the Agreement until the completion of the license period related to the Future Pictures.

Ninth Affirmative Defense

176. Paramount alleges that the willful public distribution of Licensed Games on the internet themed to Paramount's copyrighted Motion Picture Properties constitutes copyright infringement by CryptoLogic.

177. To extent, if any, that Paramount claims United States copyrights in the Motion Picture Properties, the distribution of any copyrighted material occurred when Licensed Games were placed on servers that can only be accessed for internet wagering purposes outside of the United States.

178. Such alleged distribution is not actionable in the courts of the United States.

Tenth Affirmative Defense

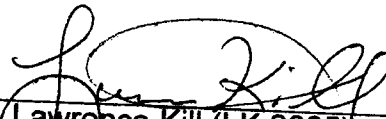

179. On information and belief, the actions which are alleged to constitute copyright infringement by CryptoLogic do not violate any foreign copyrights possessed by Paramount in the Motion Picture Properties, and to the extent if any that Paramount possesses foreign copyrights in the Motion Picture Properties, alleged violations of such copyrights are not actionable in the courts of the United States.

WHEREFORE, WagerLogic demands that the relief requested in its complaint be granted, that the claims contained in the AC be dismissed, that WagerLogic be awarded damages and appropriate injunctive relief arising out of Paramount's breach of its contractual obligations, and that an award be made of fees, costs, and disbursements, including attorneys' fees pursuant to paragraph 25 of the Agreement and such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.
